Naturland certified organic sesame from Uganda

Quality and commitment combined

We source our unhulled organic sesame, which we also offer Naturland-certified, from proven partnerships in Uganda. In the West and East Acholi region, where the sesame is grown sustainably in small-scale farming structures, it thrives in the ideal subtropical climate. After harvesting and drying, it undergoes a gentle sterilization process to ensure microbiological quality.

We also actively support the local population and use SMETA audits to ensure that social standards are adhered to in our partners' production facilities. Last year, we convinced ourselves of the quality on site.

The hand-harvested sesame seeds are sun-dried. The main harvest is from November to February, when optimal harvest conditions promise the best yields.

Impurities are then removed to ensure that only the best grains are processed. These careful steps guarantee that our sesame seeds meet the highest standards.

The rotation with legumes protects the soil and maintains its fertility in the long term.

Our commitment helps to strengthen local agriculture and secure the livelihoods of many families through stable income. By cooperating with local farmers in Uganda, we support thousands of smallholders who live in economically disadvantaged circumstances.

We are also committed to helping the local population by supporting the German aid project: Lichtstrahl Uganda.
